

My version of Flo of the Somme

There was once a dog named Flo. She was a mercy dog that saved lives. Flo was adventurous and always was there to help. She loved to explore. She had big black bolding eyes and a small black and white ears her tongue dangled out.

Rapidly running they were avoiding bombs, bullets and shooting guns. Flo was using his nose to sniff out the pilots and Ray was dodging as much flying barbed wire as he was able to, as bullets were soaring through the air. One bullet narrowly missed Ray.

Whenever Flo met someone she would jump up on them and say a doggy hello. One day, Captain Bullet was walking inspecting the men in the trench then a pigeon fell hastily out of the sky into his hands. The pigeon with a round its right foot when it landed he realised it was injured.

Flo and Ray jumped inside to see what had happened while Ray put the pilots on the donkey then they headed back to the medical corp. Everyone said "for the mercy dog that saved lives then everyone cheered."
